

The purple line encloses the geologic watershed, the area from which runoff would naturally flow into Fauntleroy Creek. The red line encloses the engineered watershed, the area from which runoff is captured in the stormwater system.